

And There Was Evening and There Was Morning, Margarita Soyfertis, 2009

“And There Was Evening and There Was Morning” was created by Margarita Soyfertis, a multi-faceted artist who began her work in theatre design. In the early 2000s, Soyfertis turned her attention to mosaic art. Her mosaic installations, both mural and sculptural, can be found in Bay Area art centers and schools as well as international public artworks in Dublin and beyond. This particular piece is located at the entrance to Shannon Park. The design for the fountain and bridge forms a spiral line to represent the connection between nature and community. The linear design along the edge of the bridge is styled with various figures, animal and floral shapes. The fountain design extends this line into a swirl representing creative force.
