East Bay Community Energy is now Ava Community

Energy

Since 2018, the City of Dublin has been a member of East Bay Community Energy (EBCE). EBCE is the not-for-profit public power provider. EBCE provides access to green energy, low rates, and a variety of community benefits.

On October 24, East Bay Community Energy became Ava Community Energy. This name change is part of a larger brand refresh for the agency. Since its inception, EBCE (now Ava) has regularly added new customer programs and expanded its service territory. The agency now serves the city of Tracy; Stockton and Lathrop are slated to join in 2025.

For more information, please visit avaenergy.org/brand. For questions about your bill or the service in general, send Ava an email or call 1-833-699-3223.

Ava Community Energy launches new Building Efficiency Accelerator for Businesses

Looking to optimize your building, reduce energy consumption and/or minimize carbon emissions? The Ava Building Efficiency Accelerator is a new program that provides free support and generous incentives for low- and no-cost projects. The program offers 12-24 months of engineering support plus collaborative workshops to exchange ideas and train your team.

Program benefits include assistance with:

- Reducing energy consumption
- Enhanced incentives for heat pump projects
- Better indoor air quality, lighting, and temperature control
- Reducing greenhouse gas emissions and overall environmental impact

For more information, visit Building Efficiency Accelerator.

East Bay Economic Development Alliance Launches Resilient East Bay Website

In partnership with the U.S. Economic Development Administration, the East Bay Economic Development Alliance (East Bay EDA) has launched Resilient East Bay, a new website showcasing the region's innovative manufacturing ecosystem with news, resources, an interactive map, reports and more.

The website serves as a comprehensive platform for promoting economic resilience in the East Bay through industrial development and advanced manufacturing. Resilient East Bay strives to connect businesses with critical resources and information, as well as assist policy makers, support organizations, and other stakeholders in better understanding the needs and opportunities to improve the region's manufacturing ecosystem.
